An expert system that has rules of the form If w is low and x is high
then y is intermediate, where w and x are input variables and y is the output variable, is called a:
A. Boolean expert system
B. Neural network
C. Fuzzy expert system
D. Realistic expert system
Answer: C
Explanation:
A fuzzy expert system is an expert system that uses fuzzy membership

functions and rules, instead of Boolean logic, to reason about data.
Thus, fuzzy variables can have an approximate range of values instead of the binary True or False used in conventional expert systems. When it is desired to convert the fuzzy output to a single value, defuzzification is used. One approach to defuzzification is the CENTROID method. With this method, a value of the output variable is computed by finding the variable value of the center of gravity of the membership function for the fuzzy output value.
Answers Neural network and Realistic expert system are distracters, and answer Boolean expert system is incorrect since it refers to Boolean values of one or zero.
