Your network contains two Active Directory forests named contoso.com and adatum.com. Active Directory Rights Management Services (AD RMS) is deployed in contoso.com. An AD RMS trusted user domain (TUD) exists between contoso.com and adatum.com. From the AD RMS logs, you discover that some clients that have IP addresses in the adatum.com forest are authenticating as users from contoso.com.

You need to prevent users from impersonating contoso.com users. What should you do?

- A. Enable lockbox exclusion in AD RMS.
- B. Configure trusted e-mail domains.
- C. Add a certificate from a third-party trusted certification authority (CA).
- D. Create a forest trust between adatum.com and contoso.com.

Answer: B

Explanation:

For each trusted user domain, you must specify which e-mail domains are trusted. It is an important security step to configure e-mail domains, otherwise it may be possible for a user from a trusted user domain to impersonate an internal user.
