You have 10,000 IoT devices that connect to an Azure IoT hub. The devices do not support over-the-air (OTA) updates. You need to decommission 1,000 devices. The solution must prevent connections and autoenrollment for the decommissioned devices.

Which two actions should you perform? Each correct answer presents part of the solution.

NOTE: Each correct selection is worth one point.

- A. Remove the identity certificate from the hardware security module (HSM) of the devices.
- B. Update the connectionState device twin property on all the devices.

C. Delete the device identity from the device registry of the IoT hub.

D. Delete the enrollment entry for the devices.

E. Blacklist the X.509 root certification authority (CA) certificate for the enrollment group.

Answer: D,E

Explanation:

B: X.509 certificates are typically arranged in a certificate chain of trust. If a certificate at any stage in a chain becomes compromised, trust is broken. The certificate must be blacklisted to prevent Device Provisioning Service from provisioning devices downstream in any chain that contains that certificate.

C: Individual enrollments apply to a single device and can use either X.509 certificates or SAS tokens (in a real or virtual TPM) as the attestation mechanism. (Devices that use SAS tokens as their attestation mechanism can be provisioned only through an individual enrollment.) To blacklist a device that has an individual enrollment, you can either disable or delete its enrollment entry.
