NEW QUESTION: 2

Which choice below is the correct definition of a Mutual Aid Agreement?

- A. A prearranged agreement to render assistance to the parties of the agreement
- B. An appraisal or determination of the effects of a disaster on human, physical, economic, and natural resources
- C. Activities taken to eliminate or reduce the degree of risk to life and property
- D. A management-level analysis that identifies the impact of losing an entity's resources

Answer: A

Explanation:

A mutual aid agreement is used by two or more parties to provide for assistance if one of the parties experiences an emergency.

It is expected that the other parties will assist the affected party in various ways, perhaps by making office space available, or computing time or resources, or supplying manpower if needed.

While mutual aid agreements may be a very cost-effective solution for disaster recovery, it does not provide for full operations redundancy.

An example of a problem with a total reliance on mutual aid would be the event that affects all parties to the agreement, thereby rendering the agreement useless. While they are an effective means to provide some resources to the organization in an emergency, they in themselves are not a replacement for a full disaster recovery plan, including alternate computer processing sites.

*Answer "A management-level analysis that identifies the impact of losing an entity's resources" describes a business continuity plan.

*Answer "An appraisal or determination of the effects of a disaster on human, physical, economic, and natural resources" describes a damage assessment

*answer "Activities taken to eliminate or reduce the degree of risk to life and property" describes risk mitigation.
