NEW QUESTION: 1
A technician arrives on site to find that two users who have the same model of smartphone are having the same issue with a specific application. Whenever they attempt to launch the application, it fails and gives an error message. Which of the following should the technician do NEXT?
A. Update the OS of the smartphones
B. Roll back the application to the earlier version
C. Reinstall the application
D. Clear the application cache
Answer: A

NEW QUESTION: 2
Which of the following is an important architectural design principle when designing cloud applications?
A. Use open source software.
B. Use multiple Availability Zones.
C. Use tightly coupled components.
D. Provision extra capacity.
Answer: B
Explanation:
Data Center resilience is practiced through Availability Zones across data centers that reduce the impact of failures.
Fault isolation improvement can be made to traditional horizontal scaling by sharing a method of grouping instances into groups called shards, instead of sending the traffic from all users to every node like in the traditional IT structure.)

NEW QUESTION: 3
Your network contains an Active Directory domain named contoso.com. The domain contains a file server named Server1 that runs Windows Server 2012. All client computers run Windows 8.
You need to configure a custom Access Denied message that will be displayed to users when they are denied access to folders or files on Server1.
What should you configure?
A. A classification property
B. A file screen template
C. The File Server Resource Manager Options
D. A file management task
Answer: C

NEW QUESTION: 4
Overview
Application Overview
Contoso, Ltd., is the developer of an enterprise resource planning (ERP) application.
Contoso is designing a new version of the ERP application. The previous version of the ERP application used SQL Server 2008 R2.
The new version will use SQL Server 2014.
The ERP application relies on an import process to load supplier data. The import process updates thousands of rows simultaneously, requires exclusive access to the database, and runs daily.
You receive several support calls reporting unexpected behavior in the ERP application. After analyzing the calls, you conclude that users made changes directly to the tables in the database.
Tables
The current database schema contains a table named

OrderDetails.
The OrderDetails table contains information about the items
sold for each purchase order. OrderDetails stores the product ID, quantities, and discounts applied to each product in a purchase order.
The product price is stored in a table named Products. The Products table was defined by using the SQL_Latin1_General_CP1_CI_AS collation.
A column named ProductName was created by using the varchar data type. The database contains a table named Orders.
Orders contains all of the purchase orders from the last 12 months. Purchase orders that are older than 12 months are stored in a table named OrdersOld.
The previous version of the ERP application relied on table-level security.
Stored Procedures
The current version of the database contains stored procedures that change two tables. The following shows the relevant portions of the two stored procedures:

Customer Problems
Installation Issues
The current version of the ERP application requires that several SQL Server logins be set up to function correctly. Most customers set up the ERP application in multiple locations and must create logins multiple times.
Index Fragmentation Issues
Customers discover that clustered indexes often are fragmented.
To resolve this issue, the customers defragment the indexes more frequently. All of the tables affected by fragmentation have the following columns that are used as the clustered index key:

Backup Issues
Customers who have large amounts of historical purchase order data report that backup time is unacceptable.
Search Issues
Users report that when they search product names, the search results exclude product names that contain accents, unless the search string includes the accent.
Missing Data Issues
Customers report that when they make a price change in the Products table, they cannot retrieve the price that the item
was sold for in previous orders.
Query Performance Issues
Customers report that query performance degrades very quickly.
Additionally, the customers report that users cannot run queries when SQL Server runs maintenance tasks. Import Issues
During the monthly import process, database administrators receive many supports call from users who report that they cannot access the supplier data. The database administrators want to reduce the amount of time required to import the data.
Design Requirements

File Storage Requirements
The ERP database stores scanned documents that are larger than 2 MB. These files must only be accessed through the ERP application. File access must have the best possible read and write performance.
Data Recovery Requirements
If the import process fails, the database must be returned to its prior state immediately.
Security Requirements
You must provide users with the ability to execute functions within the ERP application, without having direct access to the underlying tables.
Concurrency Requirements
You must reduce the likelihood of deadlocks occurring when Sales.Prod and Sales.Proc2 execute.
You need to recommend a solution that resolves the missing data issue.
The solution must minimize the amount of development effort.
What should you recommend?
A. Denormalize the OrderDetails table.
B. Normalize the Products table.
C. Denormalize the Products table.
D. Normalize the OrderDetails table.
Answer: B
Explanation:
Explanation
- Scenario:
- Missing Data Issues
Customers report that when they make a price change in the Products table, they cannot retrieve the price that the item
was sold for in previous orders.
- The current database schema contains a table named OrderDetails. The OrderDetails table contains information about the items sold for each purchase order. OrderDetails stores the product ID, quantities, and discounts applied to each product in a purchase order.
The product price is stored in a table named Products.
