Bluetooth pairing fails, and the device is not discoverable. What is the most likely cause of this problem?

A. The device is not in pairing mode.
B. The device is not in discovery mode.
C. The device is not in discoverable mode.
D. The device is not in visible mode.

Answer:

Explanation:

Bluetooth pairing fails, and the device is not discoverable. What is the most likely cause of this problem?

A. The device is not in pairing mode.
B. The device is not in discovery mode.
C. The device is not in discoverable mode.
D. The device is not in visible mode.

The correct answer is C. Bluetooth pairing fails, and the device is not discoverable. This is because the device is not in discoverable mode. Bluetooth pairing requires the device to be in discoverable mode. If the device is not in discoverable mode, it will not be discoverable, and pairing will fail. The other options are incorrect because the device is in pairing mode, discovery mode, and visible mode.
