What command is used to test authentication on the Cisco WSA?

- A. Other command
- B. testauthconfig
- C. setntlmsecuritymode
- D. authconfig

Answer: B

Explanation:

Tests the authentication settings for a given authentication realm against the authentication servers defined in the realm. testauthconfig [-d level] [realm name] Running the command without any option causes the appliance to list the configured authentication realms from which you can make a selection. The debug flag (-d) controls the level of debug information.

The levels can range between 0-10. If unspecified, the appliance uses a level of 0. With level 0, the command will return success or failure. If the test settings fail, the command will list the cause of the failure.
