NEW QUESTION: 2
Which statement about Cisco IOS IPS on Cisco IOS Release 12.4(11)T and later is true?
A. uses the built-in signatures that come with the Cisco IOS image as backup
B. requires the Basic or Advanced Signature Definition File
C. supports SDEE, SYSLOG, and SNMP for sending Cisco IPS alerts
D. requires IEV for monitoring Cisco IPS alerts
E. uses Cisco IPS 5.x signature format
F. supports both inline and promiscuous mode
Answer: E
Explanation:
http://www.cisco.com/en/US/docs/ios-xml/ios/sec_data_ios_ips/configuration/12-4t/sec-ips5-sigfsue.html
Signature Categories Cisco IPS appliances and Cisco IOS IPS with Cisco 5.x format signatures operate with signature categories. All signatures are pregrouped into categories; the categories are hierarchical. An individual signature can belong to more than one category. Top-level categories help to define general types of signatures. Subcategories exist beneath each top-level signature category. (For a list of supported top-level categories, use your router CLI help (?).)
Router Configuration Files and Signature Event Action Processor (SEAP)
As of Cisco IOS Release 12.4(11)T, SDFs are no longer used by Cisco IOS IPS. Instead, routers access signature definition information through a directory that contains three configuration files-the default configuration, the delta configuration, and the SEAP configuration. Cisco IOS accesses this directory through the ip ips config location command.
