B. Monitoring and Controlling Process Group
C. Executing Process Group
D. Initiating Process Group
Answer: B

NEW QUESTION: 2

A. 802.11g
B. 802.11a

C. 802.11ac
D. 802.11b
Answer: D
Explanation:
Explanation
802.11 is a set of IEEE standards that govern wireless networking transmission methods. The 802.11 standards commonly used today to provide wireless connectivity in home or office wireless networks are 802.11a, 802.11b, 802.11g, 802.11n and 802.11ac.
802.11b supports speeds up to 11Mbps and uses the 2.4GHz frequency.
In this question, the user is using an 802.11n WLAN card.
Although the 802.11n WLAN card can support speeds up to 300Mbps, the user is only able to connect at 11Mbps because the user is connected to a wireless network configured to use 802.11b.

NEW QUESTION: 3
Refer to the exhibit.

You have configured an interface to be an SVI for Layer 3 routing capabilities. Assuming that all VLANs have been correctly configured, what can be determined?
A. The configured port is excluded in the calculation of the status of the SVI.
B. The interface is missing IP configuration parameters;
therefore, it will only function at Layer 2.
C. Interface gigabitethernet0/2 will be excluded from Layer 2 switching and enabled for Layer 3 routing.
D. The command switchport autostate exclude should be entered in global configuration mode, not subinterface mode, to enable a Layer 2 port to be configured for Layer 3 routing.
Answer: A
Explanation:
The SVI Autostate exclude feature shuts down (or brings up) the Layer 3 interfaces of a switch when the following port configuration changes occur:
When the last port on a VLAN goes down, the Layer 3 interface
on that VLAN is shut down (SVIautostated).
When the first port on the VLAN is brought back up, the Layer 3 interface on the VLAN that was previously shut down is brought up. SVI Autostate exclude enables you to exclude the access ports/trunks in defining the status of the SVI (up or down) even if it belongs to the same VLAN. Moreover, even if the excluded access port/trunk is in up state and other ports are in down state in the VLAN, the SVI state is changed to down. At least one port in the VLAN should be up and not excluded to make the SVI state "up." This will help to exclude the monitoring port status when you are determining the status of the SVI.
