NEW QUESTION: 1

A customer's credit limit has been establish at $10,000. and current outstanding are is $7,000. The customer has active, unshipped sale coders with request dates that are two months In the future arid total $3,000. The customer calls today with a $500 order to be shipped immediately.

What happens to the order?

- A. The order does not go on hold, because credit checking only compares the dollar value tor open orders against the credit limit.
- B. The order does not go on hold, because the actual outstanding A/R has not exceeded the credit limit, and the $500 order would still cause the total exposure to be less than $10,000.
- C. The order goes on hold, because the total A/R amount is greater than 5% of the total of A/R and open orders.
- D. The order goes on hold, because credit checking is performed for the total exposure, which includes open orders regardless of their request dates.
- E. The order does not go on hold. The System automatically determines that the request date of the new order comes before the request dates of the existing open orders. The system will allow the $500 order to be processed, and put a credit hold on the order with the request date furthest In the future.
