NEW QUESTION: 4

Which DHCPv6 option is used to provide the IPv6 address of the DNS server to the client?

A. DHCPv6 Option 6

B. DHCPv6 Option 15

C. DHCPv6 Option 1

D. DHCPv6 Option 3

Answer: D

Explanation:

Using the `show ipv6 interface` command, you can verify that the IPv6 address is configured on the device. In addition, you can see if it was configured with stateless autoconfiguration. In this case, we know that the address was obtained automatically using stateless autoconfiguration because it is enabled in the output.

Stateless autoconfiguration allows a host to generate its own address using a combination of locally available information and information that is advertised by routers. The host creates a global unicast IPv6 address by combining its interface EUI-64 address that is based on MAC address, or random ID and link prefix, that is obtained via router advertisement.

To manually configure a host with an IPv6 address, you would use the `"ipv6 address IPv6-prefix/prefix-length eui-64"` command. Like stateful autoconfiguration, you can verify if IPv6 was manually configured using the `show ipv6 interface` command. If a manual configuration was performed, the output would not include the `"Stateless address autoconfig enabled"` statement.

As with the IPv4 address, DHCP can be used to obtain an IPv6 address. The DHCPv6 client can obtain configuration parameters from a server either through a rapid two-message exchange (SOLICIT, REPLY) or through a normal four-message exchange (SOLICIT, ADVERTISE, REQUEST, REPLY). To verify whether the address was obtained via DHCPv6, you would need to use the `show ipv6 dhcp interface` command.

DHCPv6 can also run in the stateless mode. This mode is also known as DHCPv6 Lite. In this mode, DHCPv6 does not assign addresses to clients. It only provides configuration information such as NTP servers, domain names, and DNS servers. If stateless DHCPv6 is used, clients must obtain routable IPv6 addresses through some other means (for example, via stateless autoconfiguration).
