NEW QUESTION: 2

At what point in the nurse-client relationship should termination first be addressed?

- A. in the working phase
- B. in the termination phase
- C. in the orientation phase
- D. when the client initially brings up the topic

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

The client has a right to know the parameters of the nurse-client relationship. If the relationship is to be time limited, the client should be informed of the number of sessions. If it is open-ended, the termination date is not known at the outset, and the client should know that this is an issue that is negotiated at a later date. Coordinated Care
