NEW QUESTION: 1

A technician would like to track the improvement of the network infrastructure after upgrades. Which of the following should the technician implement to have an accurate comparison?

- A. Baseline
- B. Regression test
- C. Statement of work

D. Speed test

Answer: A

Explanation:

In networking, baseline can refer to the standard level of performance of a certain device or to the normal operating capacity for your whole network. High-quality documentation should include a baseline for network performance, because you and your client need to know what "normal" looks like in order to detect problems before they develop into disasters.

A network baseline delimits the amount of available bandwidth available and when. For networks and networked devices, baselines include information about four key components:

Processor

Memory

Hard-disk (or other storage) subsystem

Network adapter or subsystem

NEW QUESTION: 2

Your network contains an Active Directory domain named contoso.com. The domain contains 2 WSUS servers, ServerA and ServerB. ServerB is a replica server of ServerA.

You need to configure WSUS to report data from SERVERB to SERVERA

What should you configure?

A. Reporting Rollup

B. Computer Groups

C. Synchronization

D. Update Reports

Answer: A

Explanation:

D. You can use Reports in Windows Server Update Services (WSUS) 3.0 SP2 to monitor the WSUS network, including updates, client computers, and downstream servers. If a WSUS server has replica servers, you can roll up client status information for the replica servers to the upstream server.
