B. Ability to split a mirrored ZFS storage pool
C. Encrypted ZFS datasets

NEW QUESTION: 4
You develop a Windows Communication Foundation (WCF) service.

Services (IIS). You copy the assembly containing the service to the bin folder in the virtual directory path.
You need to set up the URI that is mapped to the service. What should you do?
A. Add a Movie.svc file in the root of the virtual path with the following line. <% @ServiceHost language="C#"
Service="MovieService">
B. Add the following code segment to the web.config file.
<serviceHostingEnvironment> <serviceActivations>
<add relativeAddress="./Movie" service="Movie.MovieService" /> </serviceActivations>
</serviceHostingEnvironment>
C. Add a Movie.svc file in the root of the virtual path with the following line. <% @ServiceHost language="C#"
Service="MovieService.svc" %>
D. Add the following code segment to the web.config file.
<serviceHostingEnvironment> <serviceActivations>
<add relativeAddress="./Movie.svc"
service="Movie.MovieService" /> </serviceActivations> </serviceHostingEnvironnent>
Answer: D
Explanation:
Explanation/Reference:
Darth mentioned that probably the correct answer is C instead of B because of the missing Movie namespace. I can confirm that it works in the style of answer C.
ServiceActivations are an alternative to creating svc files.
The relativeAddresses still need an extension that is registered with WCF, therefore option A will not work. See the
